The Center for Judaic & Middle Eastern Studies at UConn, Stamford, offers credit courses within the academic curriculum in the Humanities as well as non-credit outreach programs for the community at large in all areas of Judaic culture, literature, and history, from antiquity to modern times, Israel, and Middle Eastern literature and politics, as well as in interfaith studies.

Now celebrating its twenty-fourth year, the Center has created a learning community around itself which gathers for intellectual pursuits and discussions of scholarly and contemporary issues.

The Center has been recognized for its innovative programs in the areas of traditional academic education and particularly outreach projects. Since its inception, the Center has enjoyed broad community recognition and has been financially supported by individuals, foundations, corporate gifts, and matching grants.

The Center is a recipient agency of the United Jewish Federation of Greater Stamford, New Canaan and Darien, and is also supported by the UJF of Westport/Weston/Wilton/Norwalk.

Dr. Nehama Aschkenasy is Professor of Comparative Literary & Cultural Studies at UConn and founding Director of the Center for Judaic & Middle Eastern Studies at the UConn, Stamford campus. Dr. Aschkenasy is the author of three books and numerous book chapters and articles in Judaic studies, women in literature, Israeli literature, and comparative literature, and guest editor of the AJT Review (28:1) dedicated volume. She is the recipient of several awards, has served as guest scholar at many academic institutions and community study retreats in the US and Canada, and as TV commentator on Israel and Middle Eastern politics and culture.

Dr. Jeremy Dauber is Ariana Assistant Professor of Yiddish Language, Literature, and Culture at Columbia University. He did his doctoral work at the University of Oxford, where he was a Rhodes Scholar. Dr. Dauber's first book, "Antonio's Devils: Writers of the Jewish Enlightenment and the Birth of Modern Hebrew and Yiddish Literature," was recently published by Stanford University Press. He is a frequent lecturer on modern Jewish literature at the 92nd Street Y; his research interests also include nineteenth century Jewish literature in both Yiddish and Hebrew, and the Yiddish theater.

Dr. David Kraemer is Joseph J. and Dora Abbell Librarian and Professor of Talmud and Rabbinics at The Jewish Theological Seminary. A prolific author, in 1996 he published "Reading the Rabbis: The Talmud as Literature," and his new book, "The Gastronomic Jew," on the evolution of Jewish eating practices will be published in 2005. He is also the editor of a volume on the history of the Jewish family, titled "The Jewish Family: Metaphor and Memory." Dr. Kraemer's interests are in the literary analysis of rabbinic literature, rabbinic ritual and the social and religious history of Jews in late antiquity.
